DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

(1)

The text of those sections of Title 35, U.S. Code not included in this action can be found in a prior Office action.

Claims 1, 3, 4, 9, 10, 14 and 16 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(a) as being anticipated by JP 10-218675.

JP 10-218675 discloses a method of manufacturing a multilayer substrate comprising: providing a shrinkage restraint greensheet on each side of a green sheet laminate; firing the laminate; and removing the ceramic powder residue of the restraint green sheets from both sides of the substrate by water jet blast of projection material in a hyperbaric-pressure airstream. When the restraint greensheets are made of MgO, the projection material in the blast is fine particles of MgO. JP '675 discloses using projection material of particle size of 10 micrometers and carrying out water blast by hyperbaric-pressure stream at 4.5 kg/cm^2 . JP '657 further discloses using alumina as the projection material when using alumina as the material of the ceramic for restraint and discloses that elimination nature is good and the ceramic of restraint is removed completely from the substrate (translation pg. 2-3, specifically paragraphs [0017]-[0026]).

Applicant cannot rely upon the certified English translation of the foreign priority document to overcome this rejection because the foreign priority document does not provide support for the claims. The foreign priority document, as evidenced by the translation, does not provide support for the limitation "the mean particle size of the particles of said ceramic powder is not greater than 10 μm " as now claimed in Claims 1 and 9. Since the foreign priority document does not provide support for this limitation, the claims are not entitled to the foreign priority date (4/24/98) to overcome the JP 10-218675 reference (publication date 8/18/98). Based on the certified English translation, the foreign priority document provides support for using a ceramic such as alumina in combination with water and air at a pressure of 3-4 kg/cm^2 .

(3)

The text of those sections of Title 35, U.S. Code not included in this action can be found in a prior Office action.

(4)

Claims 7, 8 and 15 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over JP 10-218675 as applied to claim 1 above, and further in view of Yam et al.

Yam et al. teach that abrasive media such as glass beads, alumina or sand can be collected and reused for additional blast cleaning (col. 1, lines 23-34, col. 4, lines 1-4, col. 5, lines 20-22).

It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to have modified the method of JP '675 by collecting the ceramic projection material after water jet blasting as taught by Yam et al. for reuse for additional blast cleaning.

Performing water jet blasting under hyperbaric-pressure airstream on both sides of the fired substrate simultaneously, as claimed in Claim 7, would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art, for speeding of removal of the ceramic powder residue of the restraint green sheets from both sides of the fired substrate.

Response to Arguments

Applicant's arguments with respect to claims 1 and 9 have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.
